IT STARTED WITH THE U.S. NAVY

Back in 1913, a group aboard the USS Arkansas who called themselves the "Happy Hour Social" arranged a twice-weekly "smoker" (a party). The crew took to calling the events "happy hours."

During these gatherings, which took place in the early evening, the sailors would watch movies, play music or go for a few rounds of boxing. The idea caught on and by the early 1900s, Naval units across the Atlantic were holding happy hours.

The U.S. Navy officially went dry in 1914.

HAPPY HOUR COCKTAILS EVERYDAY!

MIX & MATCH ANY 2 FROM THESE COCKTAILS DURING SELECT HOURS FOR £16

HAPPY HOUR ORIGINS?

"Happy hour" became a euphemism for people meeting to drink secretly before having dinner at a public restaurant, where the sale & consumption of alcohol was illegal. We can thank speakeasy culture for giving us the trend of drinking before dinner.

IT BECAME TRENDY THANKS TO PROHIBITION.

This is where the alcohol (and the illegality) comes into play. When the 18th Amendment passed in 1920, people were driven to drink underground in speakeasies. While you might imagine these secret bars kicking off around 10<sup>pm</sup>, they were actually hopping in the early evening when thirsty throngs crowded into them to get sauced before heading to dinner at booze-free restaurants. Possibly taking a tip from the sailors, people started calling these illegal pre-sessions "happy hours".

When Prohibition ended in 1933, the concept of happy hour as a sort of cocktail hour stuck around, but it was in the 1970s when bars caught on and started offering discounts.
